Dock Scheduling Case Study

Despite having prearranged rates with carriers, it can still be a cumbersome task of assigning loads to carriers. This snack food and cookie manufacturer had been a C3 Reservations customer for 2 years when they came to us with the following problem statement:

The Challenge

A leading manufacturer of snack foods in North America recently made great strides in simplifying the communication process with their carriers. With typical scheduling systems, when a manufacturer wants to plan the pickup times and alert the carriers, they may still struggle with identifying which carrier will be available to pick up on that given date and time. They were relying on manual processes - like phone calls and emails - in order to confirm the proper carrier.

The C3 Solution

Human error and manual processes are a scheduler's greatest enemy in the modern world. It takes one tiny error, and the next thing you know your entire day is backlogged. The addition of the carrier takeaway process was a game-changer for us and our organization.
